5 SENSES

The five senses of hearing, touching, seeing, tasting and smelling are the primary means we use to learn something new. Our senses work together to give us a total picture of our experiences. Kids learn best when the mind is able to put together information from all the senses into one experience. Using many senses to gain information helps learning be more meaningful and useful. Here at Rangers' Club we believe in combining fun and play with learning and cognitive development. We offer a safe environment and space for kids to try things out and have a meaningful experience through the games they play.
